For the "We Talk" dimension of the "Climate Walk" project, we are looking for dedicated Co-Wanderers-to-be who can imagine contributing 5-10 hours a week to various educational project-related activities. Depending on personal interest and background, this can be workshop planning-related research and coordination of local initiatives, localities and other cooperation partners or support in the coordination with the other project dimensions.

What do we offer:

- Exciting, varied and meaningful work in an interdisciplinary team
- Free time management and flexibility in collaboration
- Opportunity to contribute your own interests and experiences to the project and to actively help shape it
- Permission to use the jointly collected data for your own bachelor's/master's/doctoral thesis
- Prospect of long-term collaboration in the project
- New contacts and networks for future collaborations
- Confirmation of whether you are working in a legally recognized non-profit association (e.g. in the form of receipt of an internship confirmation or a job reference)

The following points would be advantageous (or the motivation for learning it):

- Experience working in interdisciplinary teams
- Long-term commitment and interest from June 2022 to hiking a bit yourself if possible
- Different language skills are an advantage Trustworthy and conscientious handling of project data and materials (e.g. educational materials: concepts, instructions) as well as correspondence with (workshop) cooperation partners
- Basic pedagogical knowledge (e.g. through educational project experience, teacher training and educational science studies) with a special focus on environmental education
- Experiences with walking meditation and situated learning concepts

Areas of responsibility (depending on interests and division within the team):

- Research activities (local initiatives and/or organizations, institutions that could be of interest for a workshop cooperation; localities/route sections for workshop planning)
- Joint development and independent translation of educational materials
- Assistance in the coordination (and depending on the time resources and sense of responsibility alone coordination) of certain workshops in combination with the Climate Walk - walking methods
- Assistance in correspondence and coordination with other project dimensions (route, research, media/art, outreach/social media)
- Assistance in correspondence and coordination with (existing) European cooperation partners
